Flathead Forest Needs to Hear from Wilderness Lovers

March 21, 2015

Dear Greetings! :

It's that time of the decade, I guess. The time when the Flathead National Forest asks again for our 'suggestions' and 'input' as to how they should manage the 2.2 million-acres of our backyard public lands. Last time we went through this exercise it was 2005.

To answer the question: It's obvious! Conserve the Forest! Manage it with foresight! And hang on to the conservation gains of the last 20-years when the nation demanded that forest managers go lighter on the land than they had over previous decades of hard exploitation.

While the grizzly bear and its advocates have been scapegoated for everything from the loss of "timber jobs", to closing off "public access", the fish and wildlife have rebounded and water quality has markedly improved. So has the local economy. Rather than having one Boss (Big Timber), the Flathead Valley economy - and the Montana economy, too - has never been more diverse or vibrant.

Ok. We usually have the "Please Donate" button here. But today is your lucky day, and we want to give to you! Headwaters Montana and RMO of Kalispell have teamed up to give away THREE $50 Gift Certificates to be awarded at random to

Why is that? You'd think it was an accident. It's not. Local businesses have discovered that the Flathead National Forest provides much more than wood fiber for the mills. It provides habitat for inspired and full living. *those who submit a comment to the Flathead National Forest. Miracles of miracles, people moved here and continue to move here for the quality of life. Clean water, good communities, and access to Nature. Wilderness sells real estate and the goods that fill houses.

The Flathead National Forest intends to complete the revision of the forest land management plan in 2016. The roll-out of this new plan is supposed to coincide with the "de-listing" of the grizzly bear from the Endangered Species Act. The de-listing could usher in a new era of increased timber cutting.

Headwaters Montana can support an uptick in the harvest. But not at the expense of the conservation gains achieved to date. And, clearly, more must be done to repair past damages and to anticipate a changing climate.

Please help the Flathead National Forest read the tea leaves. Let them know what you value about your national forest public lands. We can't over-emphasize the importance of your personal comment. It's time to step up!

The "Proposed" forest plan can be found here. Please see the section below on specific comment suggestions. Send in your comment using the comment portal here and be entered to win one of three (3) RMO $50 gift certificates! (See side bar, above)

Cheers and thanks for Stepping UP!

THE SWAN & MISSION RANGE A legacy to make Bob (Marshall) proud!

Swan & Mission Mountains Wild

~ You Have Until May 5 ~

The Flathead National Forest has released its proposed management plan. The plan sets the stage for how the Flathead Forest and the wild lands in the Swan, Mission, and Whitefish mountains will be managed over the next 20 years.

The time is now to urge the Forest Service to include Wilderness protection for these three wild and deserving areas. Please tell the Forest Service to:

This map depicts additions (brown areas) to the Mission and Bob Marshall Wilderness Areas that will protect your wild lands and provide refuge for wildlife. Write to the Flathead National Forest today to support these additions.

Expand the Jewel Basin Recommended Wilderness to the west and protect the wild Swan Front. Bring the wilderness boundary down to the valley floor.

Extend the Bob Marshall Wilderness north to include the wild and restored Bunker Creek and upper Sullivan Creek - critical areas for grizzlies, elk, mountain goats, and other wildlife species.

Widen the Mission Mountain Wilderness Area to include the wildlife corridor of Sunset Ridge, the critical bull trout spawning beds of Elk and Hemlock creeks, and the rugged, species-rich lower slopes.

You can also tell the Forest Service why wilderness is important to you and why they should protect more of it.

Please email your comments by May 5 to flatheadplanrevision@fs.fed.us or snail mail to:

So far the draft proposal provides protection for several deserving areas. For instance, Flathead Forest Service has largely adopted the Whitefish Range Partnership's Wilderness recommendation in the Whitefish Range. This includes over 80,000 acres of new wilderness! (See map at right) The Flathead also recognized two new areas along the Mission Mountain Wilderness that should be protected. But the Flathead Forest can do better!
